ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

[0045]   In an embodiment, a communication system may include a system host that transmits messages to a number of client devices, which may be dynamically grouped. The target client(s) may receive the message, compile the requested information, initiate a connection with the host over a back channel, and transmit the requested information to the host.